LOUISE
LIMERICK

On the surface, this novel (set in Brisbane) appears to be a mystery about a missing baby. But delve deeper and you'll find more layers than a chocolate gâteau. It's about friendship, cravings and, above all, how women deal with motherhood in their own ways.

Thirty years ago, three women in an insular town in America's Deep South made a secret pact. But now a death, a nosy reporter and a girl with a huge chip on her shoulder threaten to unravel the truth. An intricate tale that keeps you enthralled until the end. - tracey platt
